

JOURNAL OF PUBLIC HEALTH LEADERSHIP

Call for Manuscripts

The Journal of Public Health Leadership is a new peer-reviewed journal that publishes innovative research studies, teaching strategies, and practice programs that revolutionize public health practices, refocus public health efforts, reveal new high-risk populations, challenge old assumptions, or otherwise push the boundaries of traditional public health research, teaching, and practice. The goal of the Journal of Public Health Leadership is to foster breakthroughs in health through academic discourse on non-traditional research methodologies, innovative teaching strategies, and ground-breaking practice efforts. Controversial topics are especially encouraged.

The Journal of Public Health Leadership is interested in publishing original articles in areas that include, but are not limited to:

Leadership in Research

- Pilot or feasibility studies discovering new information
- Innovative research methodologies
- Overcoming institutional barriers to community-based research
- Descriptions of high-risk research efforts

Leadership in Practice

- Controversial prevention, case management, or treatment programs
- Unique community-campus partnerships
- Successful government relations programs/partnerships

Leadership in Teaching

- Novel teaching strategies
- Critical analysis of competencies in undergraduate and graduate teaching
- Capacity-building programs for health institutions

Other Leadership Topics

- Profiles of community, academic, governmental leaders
- Position papers advocating innovative recommendations in research, teaching, or practice
- Leadership development programs in the academic, governmental, or community sectors

To submit your manuscript or to register as a reviewer, go to www.jphl.net